

I firmly believe and support the Do Not Call list. In addition, I believe the fines should be even higher and the ability to trace the caller should be an option. I know the telephone company has the ability to find out where the call originated. In the event you are on this list and someone calls with a restricted or private line, the telephone company should provide the information and the company that called should be fined heavily. I pay for the right to speak to my friends and family. I do not pay to have people trying to sell me things and interrupt me at the most inconvenient times. It's a shady practice that should be ended, once and for all. But until it is, the FCC should have measures in place to protect me from unwanted calls.